

Speaker: Monica Tennberg

Research professor Monica Tennberg leads the Sustainable Development Research Group at the Arctic Centre, University of Lapland in Finland. She is a political scientist by education and has studied, among many other topics, climate change adaptation in the Arctic from a governmentality perspective. She served as a co-chair for the Arctic Council/AMAP sub-project on adaptation actions for the Barents area (being part of the “Adaptation actions for a changing Arctic”, AACA project). Currently, she studies politics of everyday life and adaptation in the Arctic.

